Business: <http://www.cleanwatts.com/> The group's principal activity is to provide alternative methods of fuel and power production. It is involved primarily in hydrogen production and fuel cell development. The company focuses on production of on-demand hydrogen, which uses the company's own chemical process to yield fuel cell-quality hydrogen from fresh water or salt water without harmful by-products. The group targets commercial back-up power, on-site power and micro-technology power market segments along with technology backup, emergency power, marine power, bulk hydrogen gas sales and vehicle electric power/hybrid. It hopes to commercialize its hydrogen technology for customers wanting to be free from using existing electricity grids. The group formerly named COI Solutions, changed its name in 2003 following its acquisition of the original Alternate Energy Corp. Astris Energy Inc., world leader in alkaline fuel cell technology, has signed a Letter of Intent with Alternate Energy Corp., which has acquired the rights to a unique low-cost technology for the production of hydrogen gas required for fuel cell operation.
